Europe Expects No Help From Uncle Sam

Leon Bourgeois, president of the Council of the League of Nations, talking to American newspaper correspondents, said that Article X of the covenant of the League of Nations is not considered by European statesmen as a vital and essential element of the covenant.

M. Bourgeois said he had been surprised that this Article X had caused so much emotion in the United States. He stated that Article X could be eliminated without in any way modifying the effectiveness of the League of Nations.

"Article X," said M. Bourgeois, "is scarcely more than a moral background to the covenant. It is not considered so important by Europeans as by Americans."

"There is really no sanction or penalty in this article. All penalties provided for in the covenant in order to make the league's action effective are in other articles."

M. Bourgeois' statement was made in the course of an interview arranged for American correspondents by M. Comert, principal press official of the League of Nations. After M. Bourgeois had withdrawn the question was raised among Americans as to the effect of M. Bourgeois' utterances on the presidential election in the United States. It was thereupon mutually agreed to withhold the statement until M. Bourgeois could pass upon it as being issued with the fullest authority and approval.

M. Bourgeois was seen by M. Comert, who then told the correspondents he had explained to M. Bourgeois the importance of the remarks and requested M. Bourgeois to say whether he intended them to be published in the United States. M. Bourgeois replied, said M. Comert, that he understood the importance of what he was saying and was quite willing the interview should be printed.

M. Bourgeois, continuing the conversation and replying to questions regarding the prospect of revision of the covenant by the general assembly of the League of Nations, which meets at Geneva November 15, next, said:

"The Council of the League, being guardians of the Covenant, are of

MacSwiney Case Ends in Slow Death

Tedrence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, Ireland, who died at Brixton prison on the seventy-third day of his hunger strike early yesterday, was unconscious thirty-six hours before his death. Feverish interest developed there after his demise, and although that people appeared stirred to the highest degrees of bitterness it is regarded extremely improbable that there will be any disorderly demonstrations.

Lord Mayor MacSwiney, who was unconscious several days, did not recover his faculties before he died in prison. His private chaplain and brother, John MacSwiney, was with him when the end came. MacSwiney's wife and two sisters arrived at the prison several hours later. It is understood arrangements have been made to take the body to Ireland from the prison in London. It is probable an inquest will be held after which the body will be turned over to relatives. As soon as the news of MacSwiney's death spread small knots of people began moving toward the Brixton prison. The police, however, did not allow anyone to move into the streets leading to the prison entrance.

course unable to go before the assembly with any project that alters the Covenant, but individual states, which are members of the League, may, of course propose such amendments as they see fit."

Prominent Local Man Killed in Restaurant

Woodson Henry, was shot and instantly killed by Verne Jones, traveling salesman, while the former was at breakfast in the Greek restaurant early yesterday morning. According to Pete Zervas, proprietor of the place, young Henry had ordered breakfast and was seated at the counter when Jones entered the door and began firing. Eight shots were fired, four of which took effect, Henry falling to the floor and dying instantly. Jones went immediately to police headquarters and gave himself up.

The trouble came up, it is alleged, over Henry's attentions to Jones' wife, which caused a separation in the two families last July. Mrs. Jones has recently been living with her people near Danville, but came to this city several days ago. Jones hearing of it, came to Mt. Sterling and the killing resulted. Jones was until about two weeks ago traveling salesman for a Louisville hardware concern, but had resigned to accept a position in Ohio. When interviewed at the jail yesterday he declined to make any statement other than that Henry had broken up his home.

Young Henry was the son of Joe M. Henry, wealthy and prominent citizen of this county. Besides his parents he leaves a wife and two small children.

Funeral services for Mr. Henry will be held at the grave and burial in Machpelah cemetery tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Harvard Defeats Kentucky Eleven

Although the Centre College football eleven of Danville twice placed the pigskin behind Harvard's goal, they were defeated at Cambridge on Saturday in a very exciting game by the score of 31 to 14. This was the first time a Kentucky team had ever met a big Eastern team and the exhibition put up by the Colonels is being praised by football critics all over the land. Harvard was first to score, making a touchdown in the first five minutes of play, but after this the Kentuckians came back strong and scored two touchdowns without losing the ball, making the score stand 14 to 7. At this stage of the game the 400 loyal fans who had accompanied the team to Cambridge went wild over the prospects of victory, but their hopes were soon to be crushed, as the superior weight and training of the Easterners proved too great for the plucky Kentucky boys, and although handed their first defeat in two seasons, they were by no means disgraced, and their performance will stand out as one of the games in football annals for all time to come.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which appears at the Tabb Theatre Tuesday, November 2nd, is the story of big humans, big hearts and big purposes, beyond all the futile spirit of feudalism there is the blue in the skies canopied the lonely rugged trees; the sweet spirit of June, and the iron-willed, masterful Judd.

A most elaborate production has been given Eugene Walter's dramatization of John Fox, Jr., widely read book, and those who love June in the romance will be more than charmed with Miss Louise Price's delightful presentation of the mountain heroine, who has already become enshrined in the hearts of a million book lovers.

Former Local Boys In Trouble in Ohio

A message received here last night by W. C. Hedrick stated that his son, Irvin Hedrick, had shot and seriously wounded Edward Bramblett on the streets of Middletown, Ohio, late yesterday afternoon. Both young men are former residents of this county and are well known here. It is said that the cause given for Hedrick's act is that Bramblett had followed his wife to the Ohio town and was trying to entice her away from her home. It is alleged that the Hedricks had been separated for some time as a result of Bramblett's attentions to the young woman, who is said to have left her husband last summer to go with Bramblett to Kentucky, taking with her, her six-months-old infant. Mrs. Hedrick was formerly Miss Ruby Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, of this county. Bramblett was still alive at a nearly hour this morning, but it is thought has little chance to recover.

Million Weddings, But Only 70,000 Homes

One million weddings were celebrated in the United States in 1919, but only 70,000 new homes were erected, F. Roger Miller, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Macon, Ga., told the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries at Chicago in an address on "The Solution of the Housing Problem."

The United States is the only great nation in the civilized world that has ignored housing as a national problem, he said.
